Why Your Retailers Need FDO

The Tested Clean Advantage

Independent lab testing shows 1 in 15 organic-certified products contain as much glyphosate as conventional products. FDO is independently tested to ensure pesticide levels are at least 90% lower than USDA organic limits and 99% lower than EPA standards. When your buyers ask "Is it really clean?" — FDO is the only brand that can prove it.

The Only 100% Farmer-Owned Brand in the Category

FDO is not owned by a corporation, a private equity fund, or a holding company. It is owned by the farmers who grow the grain. Fair prices for farmers. Uncompromising quality for consumers. A story that sells itself at the shelf.

Full Traceability — Seed to Shelf

Every bag of FDO product is traceable back to the exact family farm and harvest year. No other brand in the bulk category offers this level of transparency.

Regenerative Organic Certified — Fastest-Growing Segment

All Fourteen SKUs carry ROC certification. FDO is the world's largest supplier of Regenerative Organic Certified grains. Retailers who stock ROC now will own the premium position as the category grows.

Proven Velocity - $12,000,000 in bulk bin retail sales in the first year of launch at Whole Foods Market.

Farmer Direct Co-op's bulk bin exclusive was the fastest selling independent brand launch in Whole Foods Market history.

FARM RELATIONSHIPS BUILT TO LAST

Our Story. Our Farmers.

From a farmer-led co-op to a vertically integrated regenerative supply chain, Farmer Direct Organic is being rebuilt on relationships that span more than two decades.

Partners across generations. Jason Freeman (left) and Murray Horkoff in one of Murray's Saskatchewan oat fields. Their working relationship began through Farmer Direct Co-op shortly after its formation in 2002—and continues in FDO's current relaunch.

1999

Jason begins working with organic farmers and managing organic supply chains.

2002

Jason forms Farmer Direct Co-op; Murray joins shortly thereafter.

2016

Jason leaves the co-op after years of building markets alongside Murray and other growers.

2021

Jason joins Cloud Mountain Farm and begins hands-on farming in the North Okanagan.

2025

Jason buys the Farmer Direct brand back and begins the current relaunch.

TODAY

FDO is building on-farm processing, beginning at Linden Valley Organics.

A Partnership Rooted in Organic Agriculture

Jason Freeman founded Farmer Direct Co-op in 2002 to give organic family farms greater price transparency and a more direct route to market. Murray Horkoff joined soon after. Their partnership continued through Jason's years with the co-op until 2016, and the two have continued doing business ever since.

Murray and Emily Horkoff carry forward a family farming history that began on the Canadian Prairies in 1899. Their farm started transitioning away from conventional agriculture in 1995, harvested its first organic crop in 1998 and became one of Canada's early Regenerative Organic Certified farms in 2022.

Farming Experience Meets Supply-Chain Experience

In 2021 Jason moved to the North Okanagan, British Columbia to join Cloud Mountain Farm, founded by master Horticulturalist Jason Thon. The farm grows a wide range of fruits and vegetables in no-till beds using organic practices, compost, outdoor vertical farming and other innovative regenerative management methods. That hands-on farming chapter builds on Jason's work with organic growers and supply chains since 1999.

THE RELAUNCH

From the Farm to the Finished Package

When Jason bought the Farmer Direct brand back in 2025, the relaunch began with a broader vision: connect regenerative farms, transparent supply chains and value-added processing in one coordinated system. The first step is a new packaging facility at Linden Valley Organics—bringing value-added processing back to the farm, creating more value in rural communities and strengthening traceability from field to finished product.
